Course Description

This course, part one of a required two-course series with MN532, explores the role and practice of the teaching and discipling ministries of the church as graced means of cultivating the character of Christ personally and corporately. An incarnational model of teaching and learning—engaging the whole person—will be emphasized. Students will reflect on their own experiences of these ministries, both as teacher and student; engage texts on teaching, contemplative attention, spiritual formation in children and youth, virtue formation, and catechesis; and practice practical theological reflection as they build skills for teaching in various contexts. Models for learning, recent cognitive research, and instructional design models will be dialogue partners as students select and describe a context of teaching and learning; then design, teach, and evaluate a teaching/learning experience. Course Fee: $25 for required August 12th retreat, unless taking IN721 Disciple Formation.

Course Objectives By participating fully in this class, students will:

1. Learn and practice a method of contemplative practical theological reflection in a variety of contexts;
2. Articulate the characteristics and impact of cultural formation, with regards to formation as a disciple of Christ;
3. Gain an introductory awareness of teaching and learning models, human development patterns, and brain research on learning so as to communicate Gospel truths in ways that meet people in their particular stage of developmental and learning needs;
4. Be able to describe and assess the ways that a particular Christian community approaches the tasks of Christian teaching and discipleship;
5. Explore discipleship needs and approaches for children, youth, emerging adults;
6. Explore models of adult catechesis and on-going mystagogy;

Book summaries are one of the best ways to engage a student in reading a text. We are saturated daily by opinions and judgments, not necessarily based in reality. Writing a text summary helps the reader understand what the writer is saying first, before jumping to critique or focusing on disagreements. In classical models of education, summarizing of a story, text, or concept, is called narration and often done verbally. It helps the student begin teaching the text back to the instructor, and helps the instructor know whether the student understands the material.

For our purposes, you will be writing your book narrations. The second part of the assignment gives you a chance to reflect on what you read with an eye toward taking action. Again, this is to keep the focus on a close reading of the text and encourage using the material in your daily life as soon as possible.

Book Summary Format (900 words, parenthetical page citations, single space):

1. Summarize the text. What is the purpose of the book? What is the main argument the author is making? What are the main ideas? If you find yourself answering the questions, “I think” or “I feel” – stop and return to summarizing.
2. Describe 1 question or concern that the book provokes in you for discipling others or teaching the faith. How might you resolve this question or concern? What would you need to know about your context to resolve this question or concern?
3. Describe 3 important insights from the book for your ministry today. How might you implement these insights immediately in your context? What would you need to know about your context to implement these insights?

Advance notice - during the residential, you will have the following chapters or essays to read:

1. Christian Smith, Souls in Transition, Chapter 2 (PDF on Moodle)
